Development of an Appropriate Methodology and Framework for Creating a Database of Self-Help Groups

Ministry of Statistics and Programme Implementation, Government of India has entrusted KDS the task of developing an appropriate methodology and framework for setting up a database on SHGs in India. SHGs carry out multiple activities in different social and economic sectors. Many state governments and government agencies have been utilizing SHGs for the implementation of several rural and urban development programmes. SHGs have tremendous potential in the planning and execution of development programmes, especially at the grassroots level. Though SHGs have become a powerful social capital in India there is a huge data gap in respect of them in various states. Different evaluation studies show that SHGs, by and large, carry out multiple activities in different sectors such as health and education. Despite these studies, most states do not have proper information about SHGs and there is a huge data gap in respect of SHGs. The present project is an attempt to conduct a study on structure and functions of SHGs in Kerala and West Bengal, two states located in two different regions, having relatively strong SHG networks. The main objective of the project is to develop an appropriate methodology and framework for setting up a database on SHGs in India by studying Kerala and West Bengal. Dr. N.J.Kurian is the Director and Dr. Jacob John is the Coordinator of this research project.

Loan for Higher Education and Inclusive Growth: India in a Comparative Perspective

Cambridge Scholars Press, UK is in the process of publishing a book entitled as Loan for Higher Education and Inclusive Growth: India in a Comparative Perspective. This forthcoming book draws heavily from KDS study on Higher Education Loan in India . KDS had carried out this study with the support of NUEPA/Ministry of Human Resource Development.

The growth of access of higher education to college-age population in India remains quite low. The gross enrolment ratio in higher education has grown from 10 percent in 2000 to 13 percent in 2008 in India while China registered a growth of 23 percent in 2008 against 8 percent in 2000. It is a matter of serious concern that the number of individuals joining educational institutions as a percent of college-age population has not gone up significantly in India. The academic cost of providing greater access to higher education with emphasis on quality is quite mind-boggling in several developing countries like India. There is a need to raise more resources to meet the different components of costs of higher education such as academic costs, academic support cost and student welfare costs. There is an emerging need for raising resources from non-government sources to fund the higher education. Education loan within an appropriate framework of inclusiveness is a significant non-government source of finance.

The book deals with different models of education loan systems prevailing in various countries. There is a good review of international experiences in the area of education loan. It discusses Indian system of education loan with special reference to its significance as a tool for financing higher education of all sections of students in India. Based on field studies conducted in four Indian states the book explains that higher education in India has not been inclusive of poorer sections of society and in particular people from the rural areas. It covers an elaborate discussion on the operation of education loans given by banks in four Indian states. The book examines various issues of education loan and formulates an action plan to popularize it as a tool for financing higher education in India. Academic readership of the book will include practitioners in the field of education, banking and finance and development economics. Dr.Jacob John is the author of this forthcoming book.
